18:00	Yesterday, after their daily routine, Madeleine and the twins went to their bedroom (and were placed in their respective beds and he stresses they were placed together (i.e. in the same bedroom), at about 19.30. The witness and his wife, between this time and 20.30 stayed in the apartment relaxing and drinking a glass of wine.	after the daily routine, Madeleine and the twins went to bed at around 19.30. They were in their respective beds. The interviewee and her husband stayed in their apartment to relax until 8.30pm.				Concerning Madeleine, she is a happy child, good natured and full of energy. She considers it impossible that a stranger could take her without her shouting or crying. She is a smart child who knows right from wrong. They had the habit of going to eat every evening at the "TAPAS", restaurant which is about 50 metres from the apartments as the crew lives but 65 or 70 metres round the building to the back entrance.	every evening the group was to be found at the, "Tapas," restaurant at around 8.45 for dinner. While the adults were dining, the children were sleeping in their respective apartments. In answer to our question, the interviewee states that during all the meals, he never went to his apartment or to any of the group's apartments, because he has an, "intercom," and the signal comes from the apartment to the restaurant. The other members of the group went, randomly, every 20 minutes, to their apartments to make sure their respective children were asleep.		Concerning the usual routines, the informant states that she only opens part of each afternoon with her family and that not always. Sometimes she read, she went shopping or did other things. On the other days, she spent the mornings playing tennis.
20:00-21:00 (8-9 pm)	After 20.30, the witness and his wife, after looking at the children, went to the Tapas Bar, about 50 metres away, where they had dinner. As usual, every half hour and as the restaurant was near, the witness or his wife, would check whether the children were all right.	Just after 8.30pm, the interviewee and her husband, after checking on their children, joined the other adults of the group at the "TAPAS" restaurant, about 50 metres away, where they had dinner. As usual, every half hour, and given that the building is very close, the interviewee and her husband went to make sure the children were OK.	The witness went for dinner at the Tapas restaurant at about 20.30 She remembers that at about 21.10 Gerald left the restaurant	His partner, Jane, went to have dinner at the "TAPAS" restaurant at around 8.30pm and he went there at around 8.45pm.	at around 8.45pm, he and his wife left their daughter asleep in the apartment and went to the "Tapas" restaurant. The rest of the adults arrived at the restaurant around five minutes after the interviewee and his wife. That the last to arrive at the restaurant was the couple David and Fiona. That the latter arrived at the restaurant at around 9pm.	Yesterday, at around 8.45pm, like every evening, they joined the rest of the group at the, "Tapas," restaurant	He states that he, his wife and his mother-in-law arrived at the restaurant at around 8.55pm. According to what he remembers, when they arrived, all the members of the group were present, apart from the children, who were in bed. During the evening, Gerry, Jane and Matthew went, alternately, to their children's bedrooms to check if they were sleeping. He thinks they physically went into the apartments. He no longer remembers in what order they went see their children.
21:00-22:00 (9-10 PM)	In this way, at about 21.05 the witness came to the Club, entered the room using his respective key, the door being locked, went to his children's bedroom and checked that the twins were fine, as was Madeleine. He then went to the WC, where he remained for a few moments, left, and bumped into a person he had played tennis with and who had a child's push chair; he was also Brian, he had a short conversation with him, returning after that to the restaurant.	Thus, at around 9pm, her husband went to the apartment to make sure the twins, as well as Madeleine, were OK, then he went back to the restaurant. Her husband said that the children were doing well and that he had bumped into the person with whom he had played tennis, a person who has two children. At the same time, one of the group of friends, Russell, went to see his children, without checking on the interviewee's children.	At about 21.00 her husband arrived at the restaurant, having got 6" to sleep. She remembers that at about 21.10 Gerald left the restaurant. Five minutes later, the witness left, to go to her apartment to see whether her daughters were OK. At this moment she saw Gerry talking to an Englishman called Jez whom they had got to know during the holidays	At around 9pm, they had all ordered their meals. It was normal that every 15 minutes, one person from each apartment would go to the apartments/bedrooms make sure the children were ok. As normal, dinner began at 9.30pm. At around 9.25pm, the interviewee went into his apartment and Madeleine's apartment to check on the children.	That around 9.05pm, the interviewee went to the area of the apartments. Notably to the area near the windows of all the children's bedrooms. As normal, dinner began at 9.30pm. At around 9.25pm, the interviewee went into his apartment and Madeleine's apartment to check on the children.	Her husband Matthew, went to look for David Payne and Fiona Payne. At around 9pm, the couple arrived followed by Matthew two or three minutes later. He had been to check the children's bedrooms, his own apartment where his daughter was sleeping but also that of the twins and Madeleine. He listened at both closed shutters and didn't hear any noise. He also checked to see if there was any noise in Russell O'Brien and Jane Tanner's apartment. He said that he hadn't heard any noise.			They left the apartment at around 8.45 and accompanied by her son-in-law and her daughter, they went to join the rest of the group at the "TAPAS" restaurant. The McCann couple were amongst the other friends at dinner. To our question, the informant told us the given that her daughter had an intercom allowing them to hear if the children were shouting or crying, no one went to check on the spot. However, she reported that Kate and Gerald as well as other couples went a few times, on a regular basis, to make sure their children were OK.
	At about 21.30 his friend Matt (member of the group) went to the apartment, where his children were and on his way went to the witness' apartment, entering by means of a glass sliding door that was always unlocked and was located literally to the building. He entered the bedroom, he observed the twins and he did not even notice whether Madeleine was there"	Around 9.30pm was the time the interviewee should have gone to see her children, but her friend Matt (a member of the group) had just done a check in his apartment then gone to the interviewee's. He had entered the apartment by a glass sliding door door that was always unlocked and once inside had not gone into the children's bedroom. He only looked through the door, and did not hear any noise. He went back to the restaurant and said that everything was fine.	Meanwhile a man appeared (*) carrying a child () with a hurried walk. The entrance to the apartment building (1) is exactly at the place (street) where the individual appeared from. After having quickly eaten her main course, the witness went to her apartment in order to take over from Russell, so that he could have his dinner.	He recalls that Matthew Oldfield left the restaurant at shortly after 9pm to check the children. He is no longer sure who went out first, but five minutes later, Gerry McCann and his own partner, Jane, went out, almost at the same time. He thinks that Jane only checked their apartment, being worried about *. Then Gerry came back at around 9.25/9.30 and they started to eat the first course. At around 9.35/9.40 the informant left the restaurant with Matthew to check the children.	After placing their orders, at around 9.15pm, Gerry McCann went to check, only his apartment. He was held up for nearly 10 minutes because, he said, he had been chatting with Jez about tennis. During Gerry's absence, the waitress started to bring the food. Before Gerry arrived Jane Michelle Tanner also left (absented herself) having gone to see her apartment. A little later Jane arrived. Between the starters and the main course, at around 9.30pm, her husband Matthew Oldfield and Russell O'Brien both went to check on the children. Kate was also planning to go and see the children, but they told her it was no trouble, that they would go and check.			During one of these checks, Kate came back.
22:00 (10-10 pm)	At about 22.00 it was his wife Kate who went to check on the children	At around 10pm, the interviewee went to check on the children. She went into the apartment by the side door, which was closed but not locked, as she said before. She noticed that the door to her children's bedroom was completely open, the window was also open, the shutters raised and the curtains open, while she was certain of having closed them all as she always did.	When she was in the apartment, at about 22.00-22.15 she heard Kate and Fiona shouting and saying that Madeleine had disappeared.	At around 9.55, he went back to the restaurant	At around 10pm, Kate, Madeleine's mother, went to her apartment to check on her children. She came back totally shocked, shouting, saying that Madeleine was no longer in her bedroom. At that time all the adults were in the restaurant. Then, the whole group went to Madeleine's bedroom and checked that the twins were sleeping OK.	At around 10pm, Kate McCann went on her own to check her children. She came back to the restaurant in tears and told us that Madeleine had disappeared.	Towards 10pm, Kate went to her apartment, and less than 5 minutes later, she came back to the restaurant, breaking down, reporting that Madeleine had disappeared. Then everybody went to the apartment occupied by Madeleine's family. He remembers comments concerning the fact that the window and the shutters were open, while they had remained closed throughout the week.	They immediately organised search parties, in the apartment, thinking that she could be hiding in there, then outside, in spite of help from the Ocean Club's employees, the searches were fruitless. The informant does not know Madeleine well, because she lives a long way from the McCanns, and she cannot say very much about Madeleine's personality. Nevertheless, she reports that Madeleine was calm but active and energetic, with good manners. She was an attractive and a good child. During this holiday, she has noticed nothing unusual or which could be linked to the investigation.
	Later, a member of the group, Russell's partner Jane, when she went to her apartment to see her children at around 9.15pm, saw from the back [rear] about 50 metres away, on the perimeter road of the club, a long-haired person, in what she thinks were jeans, with a child in his arms and walking very quickly. But she is better able to tell you about that herself. Faced with this situation, she verified that the twins were in their respective beds, unlike Madeleine, who had disappeared. The cover was pulled back and the toys were on the pillow as usual. After searching the whole apartment thoroughly, the interviewee went back, scared and shocked, to the restaurant, to alert her husband and the others to the disappearance. The whole group then set about searching for Madeleine throughout the complex, looked at all the buildings, swimming pool, tennis courts etc.... as well as in the apartment with the help of employees, who, at the same time, contacted the authorities.			Question: And outside the group? No, there was nothing unusual and he knows of nothing special happening. That the tourist complex was quiet and that nothing unusual happened there. That during the day the children were under the supervision of the respective mini-club staff.	We all got up then and went with her to see. They were all outside some having gone to the apartment to check if in fact Madeleine had disappeared, it having been confirmed. The twins carried on sleeping. They didn't move. The interviewee remembers Kate having said that one of the windows facing to the front of the apartment was found open with the shutter raised. The couple had never opened the shutters during their stay. After this they began to search and called the police.	That during the holiday, he saw nothing abnormal concerning the couple Gerry and Kate, neither with their children nor, notably, with Madeleine. In the context of the group, he noticed nothing abnormal. That during the whole holiday, and particularly during the day and the night yesterday, nothing unusual happened in the tourist complex, which attracted his attention, or which could be correlated with Madeleine's disappearance. He describes Madeleine as being a communicative girl, happy, obedient and very well behaved. Madeleine's parents are very sociable people, known by lots of people, kind and affectionate. Madeleine is noted the daughter of both elements of the couple. She was wanted and is the result of, "In Vitro" fertilisation. There was no difference in treatment between Madeleine and the twins. He doesn't know if Madeleine suffers from any illness, nor if she is on medication. He has nothing more to say that could help the progress of the investigation.	She knew Madeleine well and describes her as very intelligent and she would not go with stranger without screaming or protesting unless she was very tired or sleeping. He regards the episode with Jane - she [Jane] only told her that she had seen an individual with a child in his arms, not knowing if it was Madeleine. During this holiday period she never noticed anything strange or relevant to the facts in question. She has no other elements to offer the investigation. No more was said.
